Budget plan would take cities' revenue

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

Local governments will be "left with no choice but to raise local taxes" if the Legislature approves the budget proposed Tuesday by Gov. Jim Edgar, according to state representatives.

Especially hard hit would be Tax Increment Financing (TIF) districts such as Granite City and Edwardsville, said state Rep. Monroe Flinn, D-Cahokia.

Under the Edgar proposal, the state would half all reimbursement of funds to local TIF districts. The Granite City TIF stands to lose $93,000 or more year under the proposed budget.

"These local governments established these districts with the urging of the state," Flinn said.

Wolf: No decision on mayor race

Sam Wolf has not ruled out the possibility of running for mayor of Granite City in 1992.

Although the retiring state representative said Wednesday, "I have no plans at this time" regarding what he will do when his term is up, he said he has heard rumors that he might make a run for the office and would not deny them.

Asked if he would run for mayor, Wolf said, "I haven't made any kind of decision."

"I have no plans at this time, but I'm one of those people who never say 'never,'" he said.

Wolf said he is too busy concentrating on dealing with the state's major publicized financial crisis to worry about what he may be doing a year from now.

"I have a job to do here (in Springfield) until next January and have no plans at this time as to what I may be doing after that," Wolf said.

Rumors that Wolf is considering a run at the mayoral office next year have been widespread in Granite City for about four months, so widespread, in fact, that Wolf confirmed he told Mayor Von Dee Cruse in December that he had no plans then to seek the mayor's position.

Wolf said that his political situation has changed since that conversation with Cruse. Wolf, 71, decided in late January to retire from the House of Representatives rather than seek a new term.

Republican Jim Radden will challenge incumbent Rep. Monroe Flinn, D-Cahokia, for the new 113th District post.

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Jim Edgar on Tuesday proposed taking more money from counties, cities and towns who consume alcohol or smoke cigars or use state employees parks or fish and hunt.

But even with revenue increases, Edgar's proposed budget would slash some agency budgets by as much as 17 percent and mean layoffs for an estimated 1,100 state employees.

Facing a projected budget gap of $1.4 billion for the fiscal year starting July 1, Edgar predicted his spending plan would face heavy opposition from the Democratic-controlled Legislature.

"This budget is going to be a horrendous budget," he said.

Suit planned to force city ward redistricting

By Bob Slat

Disgusted at an apparent lack of agreement and progress, by the City Council in redrawing the boundaries for the former 7th Ward Alderman Emerald Dawes plans to file suit against Granite City this week.

"Last July, I brought this up, and they've been playing around with it ever since," Dawes said.

"It doesn't look like (the City Council is) going to do anything. They're not picking this plan, which is probably as close

"I'm going to go to Edwardsville this week" to file a lawsuit against the city, he said.

Dawes' comment came Tuesday night immediately after a meeting of the council's Legislative Committee, attended by all 14 aldermen.

The committee had made its redistricting proposal and presented it new map to the council last month.

Although no aldermen came in with an alternative proposal Tuesday, some of them had questions regarding the map recommended by the committee.

Aldermen Jeff Worrell, Craig Tarpooff and Jim Miller all asked for the source for the population numbers on which the map is based. It was the second time Miller asked the committee to provide the information.

Committee Chairman Dan Brown said the population numbers were U.S. census block figures from Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville transposed via computer into Granite City precincts — the same figures used to procedure the County Board when it went through redistricting last year.

Miller said Wednesday the committee "unless they have something to hide."

"It seems to me it is the committee's responsibility to provide the information. Isn't the chairman the same person who called for an investigation not too long

Officials fear school's closing

A Madison man was sentenced to nine years in state prison Monday after pleading guilty to two residential burglary charges.

Van Lee Kaliyan Jr., 27, of the 800 block of Iowa Street, also pleaded guilty to one count of attempted residential burglary.

Through plea negotiations between Assistant Public Defender Tyler Bateman and Assistant State's Attorney Rich Rybale, Kaliyan agreed to a seven-year sentence on that charge. The sentence is to run concurrently with the nine-year sentence on the Kaliyan's plea was accepted by Circuit Judge Charles V. Romani Jr. at the Madison County Courthouse in Edwardsville.

The charge stems from a three-day crime spree last December.

across town," said Alderman Michael Terrell.

"If they have to close a school, then why can't it be the white kids they put on the buses and send down the highway?" he said.

"I think we need to attend the meeting Thursday and fight to keep our school."

At the open forum, school district officials plan to announce and discuss changes the district considers necessary to balance its 1992-93 budget.

About half of the city of Venice is in the Madison School District. Blair School serves as the neighborhood elementary school for North Venice and West Madison.

One of the proposals school officials have been considering is combining the first and second grade into one school, and the elementary schools and the third and fourth grades at the other.

Under the proposal, students now at Blair would be riding school buses for the first time.

According to school officials, approximately 25 percent of the ago into so-called withholding of information by the Police Commission.

"I just want to know where the information came from. If it is extrapolated from a model, we have to know that is the criterion which we are basing our decision," he said.

Worthen said the population figures, no matter what their source, are wrong.

He said that, according to figures in the commission's map is based.

Worthen's home precinct — has 378 adult residents. But the precinct has more than 500 registered voters, according to the most recent election figures, he said.

Alderman Dan Partney, a Legislative Committee member, said, "Unfortunately, we are required by state to use the census figures," regardless of their accuracy.

He said the only alternative would be for the city to conduct its own census and challenge the U.S. census in court.

Worthen said that is not a bad idea, because the federal census is "going to cost us thousands and thousands of dollars" in revenue over the next 10 years.

Motor fuel tax allocations and other sources of revenue are based on the federal figures.

Tarpoff said it is the county's responsibility to redraw precinct boundaries. He said it would be foolish to redistrict the city "and then end up with split precincts again after the county does what they are supposed to do."

The city's current ward map is confusing to both voters and candidates because there are many precincts that are now split by ward boundaries, Miller said.

Brown said County Clerk Evelyn Bowles told him the county has no plans to redraw precinct boundaries this year. He said that, even if the county did, the new precinct boundaries would have no effect on the population numbers in each ward.

Most of the aldermen agreed that the current city map is inequitable based on the one-man, one-vote principle.

While aldermen can get elected with as few as 300 votes, it would be good for only third or fourth place in some other races, Miller said.

He said the only alternative would be for the city to conduct its own census and challenge the U.S. census in court.

Worthen said that is not a bad idea, because the federal census

Survey finds mixed views on role of public libraries

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

Do Playboy and Penthouse have a place in the library? About three-fifths of librarians think they do, but 70 percent of the public believe they don't, according to a recent national survey.

The first-of-its-kind survey, conducted by Estabrook and Chris Horak of the University of Illinois, gives what Estabrook calls a "national snapshot" of opinions about libraries.

And, according to the survey, librarians and the public have differing views about the role of libraries on a number of issues.

On the question of AIDS, librarians said the libraries themselves seem to differ in their institutional and personal views.

"Based on notes in the margins, I have to say that a large number of the librarians, regardless of personal beliefs, believe libraries should not be the arbiters of culture," she said.

One librarian wrote that she wouldn't buy Playboy or Penthouse, but that it should be available.

Robert Stack, the chief librarian at the Granite City Library in the Granite City District, said he doesn't believe Playboy and Penthouse have a place in the library and that the Granite City district does not buy them.

"I know that," he said.

Association has historically advocated intellectual freedom and has historically been against anything approaching censorship," Stack said.

"I guess (not buying the magazines) is based more on my personal beliefs than anything else, but I think as a library in a smaller community it is not our role to offer these magazines," he said.

More information on suicide available in a survey was another area where the librarians and the public disagreed. 71 percent of the public thought it should not be available and 63 percent of the librarians thought it should.

Stack said Granite City has a copy of a popular book containing a description of suicide, but said it was purchased following a number of requests for it.

"We certainly haven't been pushing it. Providing information about suicide and promoting it are two different things," Stack said. "We're not in the business of promoting."

Both the public (85 percent) and the librarians (96 percent) think information concerning AIDS should be available at a library, according to the survey. But they split again over the issue of birth control. Only 39 percent of the public said birth control information should be available while 93 percent of the librarians said it should.

Stack said Granite City has large quantities of information about AIDS, birth control and a lesser amount of information about "human reproduction including birth control."

Only five percent of the librarians surveyed thought material that contained potentially offensive language should be kept out of the library while 44 percent of the public said the library should not carry that type of material.

"I can't name anything in particular, but I'm sure that our collection contains something someone would consider offensive," Stack said.

"The library profession tends to be very liberal — I tend to be more conservative than most — but as a source of information we need to carry a wide variety of information."

By using regional, national and international programs, Stack said, the Granite City Library District is able to obtain all types of books, information and other materials not on its shelves.

"Even, I suppose, copies of articles from Playboy and Penthouse." He said a recent survey showed the library has been able to honor 96 percent of requests for material and information.

Estabrook said the large differences of opinion between the librarians and the public are a result of the librarians' out of touch with their community?" a fair question and one that may be included in the next survey.

"This survey is the first time anyone ever got a look at things on the public's level," she said.

"While libraries are local, a lot of the funding for libraries comes from state and federal sources, so it is important to get a look at the 'national picture.'

"Libraries are being asked to do a lot of things and I don't think we are necessarily out of touch with the people of the community. I think it may be a question of not being in touch with the communities' view of the librarians' role."

Estabrook said the idea of surveying the librarians came after she started compiling the responses from the public.

"We started asking, 'Gee, I wonder if the librarians realize this?'"

Along this line, Estabrook said, the survey showed 39 percent of the public felt the library should provide children with a safe place to go after school while only 3 percent of the librarians felt that was the library's role.

"Libraries should be a safe place for kids to go," Stack said. "Whether that should be viewed as a place for latch-key kids to go is another question."

Estabrook said most libraries provide don't have the money, staff or physical capacity to handle being "short-term day-care" centers, but said "as a working parent whose child often goes to the library to wait after school, I understand why working parents would feel this is something the library should provide."

Stack said the library is a public institution and he believes the public will continue to serve the public's needs and desires.

"We have a lot of creative people who will keep analyzing changes and we will keep adapting to them," he said. "I have no doubt that we will be able to respond."

County fee hikes being studied

Fees may be increased in three Madison County offices to cover the cost of providing services.

The County Board's Finance Committee is considering increases for the county clerk's and recorder's offices.

If increases could provide the county an estimated $810,000 in additional yearly revenue, according to consultants hired to analyze the fees.

The consultants found, for example, that recording a deed costs the county $17.99, but this is something the library should provide.

Stack said the library is a public institution and he believes the public will continue to serve the public's needs and desires.

Editorials

Important public meeting on Madison schools tonight

The Madison School District has made many hard choices over the past several years in order to improve the district's financial status.

Those efforts were recognized in February when the district qualified to be removed from the state's financial watch list by finishing the past two years "in the black." Since 1988, the district has cut about $1 million from its annual budget.

Such belt-tightening accomplishments should lead to rewards, but the state — in a financial crisis of its own — made more cuts for the district to absorb, and Superintendent Daniel Kostencik said state budget decisions this summer could result in even deeper trouble.

In an effort to brace itself for the worst, the district in March sent out honorable dismissal letters to 26 staff members, and plans are being studied to find other places where pennies can be pinched.

The latest budget balancing plan involves possibly restructuring the enrollments at the district's two elementary schools, studying the scope of busing of students and possibly increasing class sizes.

The details of those plans will be unveiled at an open forum for the public at 7 o'clock tonight in the cafeteria at Madison Middle School. That forum will allow parents to get answers to questions about the district's plans.

It's likely that the about the possibility of increasing class sizes, longer bus rides and the elimination of the neighborhood-school concept for elementary students, and it is likely that the proposals will meet some opposition.

Kostencik agrees that the actions are undesirable but says that parents and patrons need to understand the reality of the district's financial status. About 80 percent of the district's budget comes from state sources.

The district has displayed an ability in the past to make cuts and maintain a quality education for its students. That should increase parents' confidence in the district where future cuts are concerned, but it is by no means a reason to allow any more changes without input.

Tonight's meeting will give parents the opportunity to speak out about their children's education. Those parents should be prepared to ask questions about the district's latest plans, but even more importantly they must be prepared to listen to the answers.

Health insurance, Canadian style

The following is the second of two parts of an explanation of the "universal coverage" health insurance system used in Ontario, Canada. This perspective is provided by retired Collingswood Herald editor and publisher Karl Monroe, based on information received from a friend in Canada.

My friend, Bill Rannie, much esteemed retired editor/publisher at Beamsville, Ontario, sent me a sheaf of clippings in reply to my questions about the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP).

They may have some bearing on thoughts of local people pondering whether to go to a "universal coverage" system such as Ontario has.

His cover letter concludes: "Despite the high cost of health (a considerable portion of which is paid through taxes), I know of no one who would ditch the 'universal' system for any private scheme."

There's grumbling, of course, over cutbacks and tighter spending controls, but we receive a great deal of what we spend on health care. Insofar as I know, the poorest family in Lincoln, living on welfare, receives the same level of care as a neighbor in a high earnings bracket. And the welfare patient pays not one cent, while he/she is receiving welfare or unemployment insurance.

Bill provided clippings showing the tardiness with which the Niagara District approves $1.7 million CAT-scan machines.

He says his hospital, 104 beds, doesn't have one, and the two big hospitals in St. Catharines' share one and it performed 7,500 scans last year, 25 percent increase from the year before. Three big hospitals in the Niagara area are bidding against each other to get one approved.

Bill was surprised to see an article about an ophthalmologist quitting practice because he was loaded with patients and had run up to $40,000 in maximum per year fees.

For the first $50,000 over that, the OHIP payments will be two-thirds of their costs, and after that, half their costs. Evidently, overhead costs on ophthalmology are very high and this MD decided to quit. Bill says this is the only instance he has heard of in which a doctor has quit.

In another clipping, the St. Catharines Standard heralded a hospital in Hamilton for agreeing to perform a bone marrow transplant, even though they would run a deficit to do it.

The operation was first denied, because the hospital had run out of money for the expensive procedure.

It would be a big unfairness loophole.

Employers collect health-care taxes from employees and send the big take in to the Ontario Health Insurance Plan.

Self-employed people ranging from doctors and lawyers to fishermen and farmers have gotten a free ride, up to now. The next Ontario budget will have a modified per capita tax on them. It will bring in $90 million a year and a portion of anguish from the self-employed.

The clipping on bone marrow transplants gives the cost, $180,000 per. My guess is that they cost much more in the States.

I asked him about classifying procedures and priorities, and delaying or denying them for patients who would probably live just a long and maybe less traumatically if the procedure weren't done.

It would save bunches of money. It's a form of what in the military is called triage, the quick decision on who gets the attention. It did not seem to be an Ontario opinion on that.

I am glad I read Bill's take on the Ontario system. It is universal and costs central government bundles of tax dollars.

But it seems to resemble in some ways the "pay or play" scheme advocated by some Senate Democrats. The huge difference is that "pay or play" leaves lots of the least well off out of everybody, simply.

The payroll tax covers part of it, as "pay or play" would do, but the central government through other taxes picks up the rest.

"Pay or play" makes a stab at cost containment so complex it is hard to describe. It has employers or employees or the federal-state government paying coverage from hundreds of companies, owing to set up standardized data processing to cut costs, but not promising when.

The bottom line is that Canadians grumble about the costs, but wouldn't think of giving up universal care. They just show their card and are taken care of.

At the moment, the doctor or hospital submits a bill and gets reimbursement by return mail. No worry, no hassle, minimum paper work. Can anyone in the states deny that's a better way?

P.S. I just got another set of clippings from Bill. Last year, Quebec proposed a system that included a $5 fee for each visit to a doctor and a $10 room and board for hospital stays. It didn't stand and the federal Health Minister declared universal care "sacred."

Ontario spends more than $17 billion a year on health care, about one-third of the entire provincial budget.

No holds barred as political campaign unfolds

Our guest

(Carol Clarkin writes a regular opinion column for the Edwardsville Journal.)

Since we've entered the rough season of the down-and-dirty employment year — and it's bound to get rougher, dirtier and much, much farther down — it seems like a good time to recommend some sensible reading.

I do this now and again, and my current advice is to run, don't walk, to your nearest book store and pick up "The Paperback of Whores," by P.J. O'Rourke.

The book, which incidentally was a best-seller several months ago, is not to be judged by its title — it's not porn.

The writer's attempt to "explain the great U.S. government" and it couldn't have appeared at a better time.

I won't spoil anyone's enjoyment of the book by over-quoting O'Rourke, but a couple of examples of his style and humor won't hurt.

Beginning the chapter on political conventions, he writes, "The American political system is a gigantic Mexican Christmas fiesta. Each political party is a huge piñata — a papier-mâche donkey, for example.

"The donkey is filled with full employment, low interest rates, affordable housing, comprehensive medical benefits, a balanced budget and other goodies. The American voter is blindfolded and given a stick. The voter then swings the stick wildly in every direction, trying to hit a political candidate on the head and knock some sense into him."

I gather that O'Rourke believes the piñata might also resemble an elephant.

The convention writer writes, "A lot of public nodding and citizen knitting of brows would be called for, you'd think. Yet when our country's only two political parties with more than 10 members each under pressure to get together, the delegates act like Shriners on a tool."

"I'm exaggerating. Shriners ride tiny motorcycles around in circles, which is more useful than anything political convention delegates do, and Shriners have aren't as funny."

And further: "Both Democrats and Republicans are guilty of mindless sports-fan mentality, rat-gagging, gluttony for political office and ideology without idea."

Democrats, O'Rourke says, are the party that gets most activated by the party that says government can make you richer, smarter, taller and get the chickpeas out of your lawn.

"Republicans are the party that says government doesn't work and then get elected and prove it.

"One philosophy is not necessarily an improvement on the other, but it's good to have both to fairly to come, you've got to have some teeth under your pillow."

O'Rourke believes that Democrats are like Santa Claus and Republicans are like God — I'll help you to find out why for yourselves. And he DOES have a Maker book on it.

As far from O'Rourke's book, the biggest laugh I've had to date this campaign season was a New Yorker cartoon showing two tourists looking at the front of the White House, across the fence, which is a banner reading "Keep Barbara Bush in the White House."

One tourist remarks to the other: "Well, he said he'd do anything."

And laugh we must — not just because so much of it is ridiculous, but to keep from crying.

Bring past wars' prisoners home

TO THE EDITOR:

Newspapers, TV and radio have carried many reports about our servicemen, such as Navy Lt. Daniel V. Borrell from Olney, Ill., who is being held in South Korea. They are our POW/MIA (prisoners of war and missing in action).

Many families and loved ones are told with great angst about these men that they are still out there and that no effort is being spared to obtain their release.

I also urge each reader to get the petition titled, "Bring Them Home, Don't Forget Our POW/MIA's."

I'll be glad to send a copy to anyone who sends a self-addressed stamped envelope to me at RR 1, Box 210, Kansas, Ill. 60933. It can then be photocopied.

Or they can get them at $8 per hundred plus 15 percent ($2 minimum) for shipping and handling from the POW/MIA Society, Appleton, Wis. 54913-8040.

Let's flood our politicians in Washington with these petitions and do our part to bring them home.

Early church was located at park

TO THE EDITOR:

The church in the background in the picture in the March 29 Granite City Press-Record/Journal was the original Park Avenue Methodist Church.

At that time, it was located northwest of the 300-foot-diameter circle park at the intersection of Edison Avenue, 20th Street and Niedringhaus Avenue.

In 1903, the circle park was eliminated and the streets were opened through.

In the meantime, the Niedringhaus brothers gave very substantial financial help to the denomination and the church was renamed in their honor, Niedringhaus Methodist Church.

The picture was taken by my brother, Homer Frohstadt, in 1903. He took many early pictures and later became a commercial photographer in Omaha, Neb.

The reason why I want a terrier is because I have a new hobby... and because terriers are good watch dogs so I feel a little safer."

SIUE project is in Edgar's new budget

SPRINGFIELD — A $5 million grant for a utility project at SIUE is in Gov. Jim Edgar's new budget, which was submitted to the Legislature on Tuesday.

Replacing the high-temperature water distribution system at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville was ranked fourth by the state Board of Higher Education among 37 higher-education construction projects it evaluated.

Regarding community colleges, Edgar said he believes additional investment in college buildings is justified, despite proposed cuts in operations of most schools.

The governor said he wants community colleges to be the centers of "training for future jobs." His spending blueprint calls for shifting job training programs from other state agencies to the state Community College Board and then to the colleges.

The governor's budget includes construction projects at the Alton Mental Health and Developmental Center and the Department of Corrections' Pere Marquette Youth Center near Grafton.

At the Alton center, the budget includes nearly $1 million in renovation work. The biggest project would be $455,000 to replace the ceiling and to increase the cooling, ventilating and air conditioning to the energy management systems.

cision to accept his resignation or not," board president Mark Eavenson said. "If we do not find someone prior to June 30, the decision to accept the resignation will be up to the board."

The board did decide to begin a search inside and outside of the district immediately based on a motion by board member Carolyn Nemeth.

The board's decision is made on a new superintendent the better, Eavenson said.

"We hope to have many qualified applicants, but we'll choose carefully. We will make a quick, thoughtful decision," he said, adding that the board has time on their side because of Walmsley's availability as superintendent until June 30.

Walmsley will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. today (Thursday) at Irwin Chapel, 3960 Maryville Road, Granite City, where services will be conducted at 1 p.m. Friday with the Rev. Allen Reiter officiating. Burial will be in Jefferson Barracks National Cemetery, St. Louis County.

Walmsley has been the Granite City superintendent of schools for six years and a district employee for 29 years.

He said it would be a mistake if the board did open the position to outside candidates, Eavenson said.

"I personally hope the new superintendent will be someone within our district because they deserve a chance to move up on the ladder of promotion, however, we must open our minds to outside candidates," he said.

The board has specific qualifications for a new superintendent, Eavenson said, but will also look for certain characteristics that appear in Walmsley, he said.

The most important characteristics we'll be looking for in the search will be a candidate who will place the children of our district first and foremost everyday, on who will work well with the district and the surrounding community; and a candidate who is motivated to join in a class-action suit with other TIF districts," Eavenson said.

Walmsley has been the Granite City superintendent of schools for six years and a district employee for 29 years.

He said it would be a target again.

"We have an obligation to repeat a bond issue. We have stated development goals and we have ongoing property acquisition, all based on TIF," Miller said. "I guess if this goes through, the option would be to join in a class-action suit with other TIF districts."

Miller said some local governments have abused their ability to form TIF districts — placing as much as 50 percent of a city in a TIF district.

He said the rogue TIF districts are to blame for the cuts because their abuses have allowed the TIF money to be put into the table in budget negotiations. He said the cuts don't take the "track records" of the TIF's into account and punish the good with the bad.

The other thing is that, where TIF districts work, they work very well," Miller said.

"I know Gov. Edgar has blasted TIF districts, but he's never been to ours."

laws and court decisions. Edgar said he had no choice but to call for further "downsizing" of state government.

Revenue increases are needed because otherwise "we would have to make cuts no one has ever dreamed of," he said.

General revenue fund spending would increase from an estimated $12.5 billion to $13.367 billion. Overall spending would be up from about $27 billion to $28 billion because of more federal money for welfare, Medicaid and transportation.

The budget includes $83 million in new revenues from increasing the tax on beer from 7 cents a gallon to 23 cents; on wine with less than 14 percent alcohol from 23 cents to 67 cents on stronger wine from $0.60 a gallon; and on distilled spirits from $2 to $3.41 a gallon.

Noting the liquor tax hasn't been raised since 1989, Edgar insisted that his proposal did not violate his 1990 campaign pledge to oppose higher taxes.

The biggest revenue booster, however, would come from taking away tax credits for citizens and counties are scheduled to receive next fiscal year from the state income tax surcharge.

Edgar also proposed the state keep sales taxes raised in Tax Day 1990 and 1991. Edgar said the program was "out of control" and that the state needed to keep the $18 million a year.

fund."

Wolf said, "I know local governments were told not to fix in any permanent commitments based on the surcharge money, but that's easy for us to say and hard for them to do. I expect (Edgar's surcharge) proposal to meet all kinds of opposition."

Granite City Alderman Jim Miller, chairman of the city's Downtown Committee and a member of the TIF Commission, called the proposal "ugly," but said it was not unexpected.

He said the city's TIF reimbursement, which is legislation originally required to be paid out of a dedicated account, was cut twice last year.

Miller said he knew it would be a target again.

"We have an obligation to repeat a bond issue. We have stated development goals and we have ongoing property acquisition, all based on TIF," Miller said. "I guess if this goes through, the option would be to join in a class-action suit with other TIF districts."

Miller said some local governments have abused their ability to form TIF districts — placing as much as 50 percent of a city in a TIF district.

Witter beats buzzer, Kahoks

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

This is why Amanda Witter is an All-American candidate: For more than 79 minutes, Tuesday night in Collinsville, Lady Warrior senior striker hadn't come within a long-distance phone call of scoring. Granite City hadn't played all that well in its first serious test of the season and might have been hard to get out of town with a 1-1 tie.

But Witter took charge in the Lady Kahok penalty area when it is really, really heading the ball. From goalie Esti Miller and then knocking the ball into an empty net with five seconds left for a 2-1 Lady Warrior win. Granite City improved to 3-0 and Collinsville fell to 2-2. The Lady Warriors had got an early leg up in the annual battle for metro east supremacy.

"I guess my head just overpowered the goalie's hand," said Witter, who had known she had the ball in. It was in the air and I went to head it while (Miller) reached for it. I was able to knock it toward the goal and shoot it in."

Tammy Dutko took a free kick from just inside the left sideline and Shawn Odom was credited with the assist.

"I saw Tammy getting ready to go with 18 seconds left and I thought, 'I'm gonna score fast,'" said Witter, who got her fourth goal of the year. "The play just started and I had no idea how much time was left when we scored."

We didn't want overtime tonight. That would have been too nerve-wracking. We feel kind of lucky.'

— Amanda Witter

The win was a narrow escape for the Lady Warriors and a disappointing one for the Lady Kahoks, who probably held a slight edge in play most of the night.

"I'm not really worried about what happened on the last play," said Collinsville coach Andy Kosberg. "Our goalie might have been late, but there's going to be a lot of contact on both sides on a play like that."

"What's really frustrating is that this is the third time Granite City has scored on the minimum again," Kosberg said. "It's over. It's done. It's over. It's over."

sion, and a very painful deja vu."

Kosberg was an assistant coach in 1988 and 1989 when the Lady Warriors scored their tying goal in the final minutes of the sectional championship match year. Collinsville won both of those games on penalty kicks, however. Witter scored the 1989 goal as a freshman.

"We didn't want overtime tonight," said Witter. "That would have been too nerve-wracking."

Witter scored into the same goal where the Kahok beat team had tied it before. There was a fall in sudden death overtime.

Tuesday might not quite make up for that for coach Gene Baker, but it's a start.

The unbeaten Lady Warriors face the acid test this weekend. Granite City, 4-0 after beating O'Fallon, 3-0 on Wednesday at Memorial Stadium, will get a taste this weekend of what they hope to get more of in about eight weeks. The Lady Warriors will play in the Rockford Boylan tournament, a six-team event which featured the two events which played in the state championship game in 1991.

Granite City will face defending state champion Libertyville on Friday. Saturday at 10 a.m. they will face Waukesha Valley, last year's state runner-up and the team which beat the Lady Warriors 2-0 in the state semifinal. Granite City finished the year with a 3 p.m. game Saturday against Rockford Boylan, a state quarterfinalist each of the last four years.

Gratiate and Springfield are also in. Each team will play three games, with the tournament winner to be decided by goal differential in the case of a tie. Springfield was the team which finished with the best record in sudden death overtime on Shawn Odom's goal to qualify for state last year.

"It fit the definition of the rule," said Kosberg. "You're supposed to call the hand ball if the arms are above the head or away from your sides. At the time, I was all the time. It was a judgement call, but I'm not going to disagree."

Senior Caryn Chasteen tied it just 40 seconds into the second quarter of overtime. Now, Odom sent a short free kick laterally to Chasteen, who beat Granite City goalie Stephanie Kult from 18 yards out to the top left corner. It was the first goal all year in sudden death overtime on Shawn Odom's goal to qualify for state last year.

"It was a lack of communication," said Kosberg.

"I knew he would get the best teams in northern Illinois."

Horvat serves on the state advisory committee with Baker. Libertyville won state last year, and the Wildcats return 13 players from last year's team which set a state record by allowing only five goals in 27 games (25-1-1). Sophomore Kelly Karl, sophomore Jenna Sorenson and senior Nikki Kainos are key returnees. The 13-1-1 1989-90 loser to Libertyville in the state title game is led by 47-goal scorer Debbie Keller, now just a junior. The Warriors were 25-3-1 last year and had 18 players. Boylan returns 19 players from last year's 17-5-3 team, and the Titans averaged more than three goals a game in 1991.

It will be a learning team. Baker said of the rookies: "We have to learn to be emotionally stable. We'll be moving from a tough game to an even tougher one in this tournament."

Greene addresses American Indian image in 'Thunderheart'

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

Actor Graham Greene, known for playing noble American Indians, says he wants to help eliminate what he feels is Hollywood's perennial treatment of Indians as one-dimensional, heroic individuals.

In his latest film, "Thunderheart," Greene gets the opportunity to work on both points by playing Walter Crow Horse, a tribal leader who is a resistor in the poverty stricken Badlands of South Dakota. Crow Horse works alongside the FBI to investigate a murder.

Greene co-stars in "Thunderheart" with Val Kilmer and Sam

South Dakota and ride a motorcycle. How much more induce- ment did I need?"

Greene came into national prominence when he was nominated for Best Supporting Actor in "Dances With Wolves."

"In the early days of shooting 'Dances With Wolves,' I think all had the feeling we were onto something," Greene said. "But we weren't really sure what it was. We had to go to 70 people each evening just for the dailies. That's unusual."

"When the union guys come on their own time to see how the day's shooting went, it's a pretty good sign you may have something important."

Greene was born in the Six Nations Reserve in Ontario, Canada, and is a member of the Oneida tribe. He worked as a draftsman and civil engineer before he entered the entertainment industry as a technical for rock bands. Greene's first feature film was the forgettable "Revolution," starring Al Pacino.

"My mailbox is full of scripts from the '90s, ever since my nomination," Greene said. "It's a good feeling to have that security."

"Besides that, I got to go to

It hasn't always been like that. I scrounged around doing theater in Canada and England for a time. But I think there to be a need for a dominant, recognizable Native American actor these days, and I guess I'm it, which is really strange since I'm from Canada."

"Thunderheart" is directed by Michael Apted, who recently completed the documentary "Incident at Oglala." It focuses on the murder conviction and imprisonment of American Indian Movement leader Leonard Peltier.

"Our movie was inspired by the Peltier story, but it is primarily a work of fiction," Apted said.

"Graham was my only choice for the role of Walter Crow Horse. He has a firsthand understanding of the Peltier case and this topic."

"I don't think I could have found that combination with any-

Baby Animals' debut recording wins praise

By Alan Sculley
Correspondent

At first, glance, the idea of teaming the hard rocking Australian band Baby Animals with producer Mike Chapman for the group's second record might seem like an odd pairing.

Chapman is best known as producer of Blondie and Pat Benatar's early records, two acts that are considerably more pop than the rough and ready Baby Animals.

It turns out the members of Baby Animals — singer/guitarist Suze DeMarchi, guitarist Dave Cullen, drummer Mike Cullen and bassist Eddie Parise — were well aware of Chapman's history and had a few doubts of their own whether Chapman was the right man for the job.

But Chapman's hesitations dissolved when they discovered another side of Chapman's musical production resume.

"We had definite ideas as to how we wanted it (the record) to sound, so we sent her a tape, just come in and rip it apart and build it back up and make it into some sort of pop thing," Leslie said.

"But then you figure he wrote a lot of the Sun Quattro stuff, and that was quite hard-edged," he said. "And when we found out he wrote 'Ballroom Blitz' for the Sweet, well that was sort of the clincher."

The choice of Chapman is paying dividends for the group. The Baby Animals debut has been widely praised as one of 1991's most promising hard rock acts, and sellers like Brian 'Adams' and Van Halen have introduced the group to sizable audiences worldwide.

Leslie said the debut CD's success is due in part to a good snapshot of the band's sound the band members had crafted in their first year.

"We were really conscious when we were recording not to overproduce because we'd been working on it a couple of years and we didn't really want to put anything in there that we couldn't pull off live," Leslie said.

"We all get a little bit disappointed when you go out and then an album or whatever and then you record see the band live and it's sort of underneath in the group's playing."

Leslie said Chapman knew when to push for a precise performance and when to allow for a little spontaneous combustion in the group's playing.

"Just as far as extracting a performance, he was good in that sort of sense where on certain occasions he would be quite strict as to what he'd let us get away with," Leslie said. "And on other things, like recording the solos, we'd do a one-take solo and he'd say, 'That's fine.' And I'd go, 'Oh, can I have another go?' 'No, no, that's cool. You got the moment there.'

"So there's like mistakes and attitude and all that sort of stuff in there, but it's got very honest human element because it's not too manufactured," Leslie said.

The release last year of "Baby Animals" capped a rapid rise from being an Australian pub band to an international recording act signed to Imago Records.

Baby Animals came together in late 1989 around singer DeMarchi, native of Perth, western Australia who spent the mid-1980s in England writing and recording as a solo artist for EMI Records. The prospect of being grouped with the likes of Motley Crue had not suited DeMarchi, however, so she moved to Sydney hoping to form a band more true to her rocking tastes.

Baby Animals open for Van Halen April 15 at the Arena. Tickets for the 8 p.m. show are $22.
